But Most of Them Fall in Fields and Woods,
It Is Claimed

DOWN MANY SUNDAY

Officially Announced That
141 German Planes Were Destroyed During Day

LONDON, Aug. 19.—(INS)—German planes swept over Britain today, dropping showers of incendiary bombs on northeast England, as Britain claimed the greatest toll of German planes during the war after yesterday's massive attacks on the London area.

Shortly before 3 p. m., additional Nazi planes were reported in the vicinity of a southeast inland town.

Between 75 and 100 incendiary bombs were dropped by one raider alone in an attack on northeast England but most of them fell in fields and woodlands.

While RAF bombers again raided both Germany and Italy, it was officially announced that 141 German planes were destroyed in the furious fighting yesterday. Fighter planes brought down 126 in aerial combat. Another 13 were brought down by anti-aircraft fire, and two by searchlight crews. Only 22 British craft are missing, the announcement said.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—(INS)—German air attacks against Britain slackened somewhat during the night and early today following the devastating reception meted out to Nazi craft in yesterday's massive attacks on the London region and on Royal Air Force bases and other objectives in the south of England.

At the same time it was reported that Royal Air Force bombers again raided both Germany and Italy during the night, but details of these assaults were not immediately released.

Early this morning residents of Britain's south coast saw flashes of anti-aircraft fire and searchlight beams.

Hold Colored Resident Without Bail For Court

Charged with felonious entry and burglary, James Nunn, colored, was held without bail for court today after a hearing before Justice of the Peace Edward Lynn, in the municipal building.

Nunn pleaded guilty to the charges. Nunn was found beneath the bed of Mrs. Thomas Tanner, Beaver and Buckley streets, Saturday morning. After arising as usual, Mrs. Tanner went to the first floor of her home, and there discovered that a screen had been removed from a front window. She notified her husband who made a search of the house. Then later Mrs. Tanner, in going to her room, saw a colored man beneath the bed. She called her husband who was in the bathroom, and Tanner, a former Pennsylvania Railroad police officer, procured his revolver, went to the room, and ordered the man out.

Tanner then took Nunn to the Bristol police station, where he was arrested and held for a hearing today.

Accuses Father of Shooting at Own Son

Russell Vandegrift, Eddington, was held in $800 bail for court today after a hearing before Justice of Peace Edward Lynn.

Vandegrift was charged with assault and battery and wantonly pointing a gun.

The alleged affair occurred Saturday at the Vandegrift farm, when it is said that Vandegrift pointed a gun and shot directly at his own son and a playmate of his son.

At the hearing this morning Mrs. Mary Cole told Justice Lynn that Percy Vandegrift, 19, son of Russell Vandegrift, came running to her house and told her to call the police, that her father had shot at him and another boy.

Mrs. Rose Tomlinson told Justice Lynn that she heard a commotion around the Vandegrift place and saw the gun pointed at the two boys and that it was fired by Vandegrift.

Percy Vandegrift said that he and a chum asked his father if they could feed the chickens. The Vandegrift boy said that his father gave his consent and agreed to pay them ten cents.

Then it is alleged that Vandegrift went to the chicken house and seeing the boys in the rear of the buildings told them to stand up. The boy said that his father then aimed the gun and shot. He and his playmate dropped to the ground and then ran for help.

It was the contention of neighbors that Vandegrift uses a gun freely about the place and that they consider him dangerous to the community.

Vandegrift said that he heard a noise in his chicken house, that he recently lost 200 chickens and that he fired in the air to scare whoever might be in the chicken house.

R. L. Christman, Penna. Motor Police, investigated, and said Vandegrift when arrested was intoxicated.

British Evacuate Somaliland, State Italians

Rome, Aug. 19.—British troops are beginning to evacuate the British Somaliland capital of Berbera under the hammer blows of Italian aviation and ground forces, authoritative Italian quarters claimed today.

Official quarters stated: "We have definite information that the English are beginning to embark troops from Berbera."

"The situation greatly resembles the English evacuation from Dunkerque."

This statement was made in Rome a few minutes after an Italian military bulletin announced that Italian troops have captured and advanced beyond Lafaruk, south of Berbera, and are pursuing the British forces toward the coast.

"Since Zella—already held by the Italians—and Berbera are the only two ports on the whole British Somaliland coast," Italian authorities declared, "we are having at Berbera a repetition of what happened at Dunkerque."

"Bitter rearguard actions are going on near Berbera and we expect these will be finished tomorrow. There is little resistance elsewhere."

"Whereas the British are using splendid Rhodesia and Indian native troops, we are trusting the main action to Italians and natives are engaging only in subsidiary fighting."

At the same time these sources said that nine British planes were brought down during the air raid against Bardia on the Libyan coast.

They added that a fleet of British ships was sighted Aug. 16 and the vessels were bombed all day but escaped under protection of bad weather.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

Thornton Lewis, of Holiday Hill Farm, Windy Bush Road, New Hope, has been appointed Bucks County chairman of the Associated Willkie Clubs of Pennsylvania. His selection was made by William H. Harmon, state chairman.

A resident of Perkasie, L. A. Pritchard, recently completed 51 years of service with the Morrisdale Coal Company.

LOWER BUCKS BOASTS 3 SUMMER THEATRES

Bucks County Playhouse Attracts Many People Each Evening

MORRISVILLE, YARDLEY

The lower section of Bucks County now boasts of three of the thriving Summer play-houses being operated among the many in the East this Summer—the best-known one being the Bucks County Playhouse at New Hope; another at Morrisville, and a third at Yardley.

Popular Broadway successes are being staged therein, as well as many old favorites, and the following is growing each year.

The Bucks County Playhouse is operated as a community project, the plays being staged in a 200 year-old grist mill, converted into a Summer theatre. Close by the old canal which runs through New Hope, and but a stone's throw from the Delaware River, the theatre nightly attracts devotees of the stage plays.

The company which purchased the old property was organized by Donald Walker, Lambertville youth who has achieved fame on Broadway; Henry Chapin, gentleman farmer of Jericho Valley; and George Gwyer, mystery story writer. The possibilities were quickly seen by the playwrights, actors and producers of the section, and soon seats, stage, dressing rooms, etc., replaced grist mill equipment.

Completed in March, 1939, the Playhouse opened last Summer. That was such a runaway success that this Spring it was decided to enlarge and improve the picturesque structure and $10,000 was contributed for the purpose by writers, artists, bankers and storekeepers. A compressor air-cooling plant was installed and carpentry and paint shops built on.

The management was turned over to Kenyon Nicholson, author of many hit plays and for 19 years a resident of Raven Rock on the Jersey side of the Delaware, who resigned from the theatre board to become managing director. His co-producer is Theron Bamberger, former Philadelphia newspaperman and well known as a Broadway publicist-producer.

Destinies of the Playhouse are in the hands, as it were, of Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman, authors of "The Man Who Came to Dinner," "You Can't Take It With You," "American Way," "Fabulous Invalid," and "Once in a Lifetime;" Jack Kirkland, adapter of "Tobacco Road" and scenarist for Hollywood; and Margaret Linley, of Stockton, Dore, who is Continued on Page Four

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

Cause For Concern

Washington, Aug. 17. AS THE days go by, the conviction grows among thoughtful men that the whole hope of success for the third-term effort is based upon being able to make such spectacular use of the international crisis that all other issues will be obscured and the people come to accept the Indispensable Man theory which Mr. Roosevelt personally cherishes and which he utilized to justify the "draft."

IT IS the war upon which the New Deal politicians depend. Without the war their candidate would not be running. Without the war there would be no "great national emergency" behind which to play their third-term politics. Without the war there would be no national defense program and ten-billion-dollar appropriations to hide the horrible mess which he has made of the Federal finances and enable him to pose as aloof from politics and engrossed in the grave problems of the Presidency. To achieve his ambition to serve longer than any other President, somehow Mr. Roosevelt has got to convince the country that no one else is capable of protecting it from the outside dangers which menace us.

BEFORE the Willkie nomination neither he nor his White House intimates felt there would be much difficulty in creating that impression. Since the Willkie nomination both his and their confidence has considerably diminished. Reports from those sufficiently close to know the facts, are that the optimism of the "inner circle" strategists has been badly shaken by developments and that, at this moment, there is among them something not far from dismay. Evidence of this has been given in Continued on Page Two

Arousing Interest In Vote On Sunday Movies

By Everett Gerry

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
HARRISBURG, Aug. 19.—The motion picture industry and church organizations were launching an 11th-hour drive today to arouse public interest in the November vote on Sunday movies in more than 300 communities of Pennsylvania.

It was estimated that 326 municipalities which voted on the issue five years ago will exercise their privilege under law to do so again in 1940.

The approaching election furnishes the first opportunity under the law to reverse whatever decision was made by the electorate of these communities five years ago. September 5 is the deadline for filing petitions to place the issue on the ballot in November.

Williamstown, in Lehigh County, was the latest community to pave the way for the Sunday movie vote referendum when more than the required number of petitions were filed last week with the county commissioners. The referendum will furnish a lively election issue for Harrisburg voters.

In 1935, 167 municipalities voted in favor of Sunday movies, while 158 communities voted against them.

The theatres themselves were taking the initiative in August by asking movie-goers to lend their signatures to petitions.

Opponents on Sunday movies, including powerful church groups, were preparing to place the question before the voters of the 167 communities.

Theatre managements, on the other hand, were ready to bring another vote before the electors of the 158 communities which opposed Sunday movies in 1935.

Church people, however, were informed of their opportunity to vote on the question by such organizations as the Lord's Day Alliance of Pennsylvania. Spokesmen for both sides said it was too early to judge public interest at this stage of the campaign.

The Rev. William B. Forney, general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, said that the opponents of Sunday motion pictures would be victorious.

Dr. Forney was seeking to arouse the interest of church elements from the Alliance's headquarters in Philadelphia. He said:

"We propose to place this question on the ballot in Philadelphia and in many other communities throughout the state. But we want to win in Pennsylvania's biggest city. That is the important thing."

Sunday movies now are permitted in Philadelphia.

TWO WASHINGTON FUNERAL CHAIRS HIGHLY PRIZED

Two Antique Pieces Were Painted Black at Time of
First President's Death

AT FALLSINGTON HOME

Many Unusual Relics Also To
Be Found in Fallsington
Library

FALLSINGTON, Aug. 19.—Two "Washington Funeral Chairs," as they are commonly known, are the proud possessions of the Misses Emma, Jennie and Lydia Moon, of this village.

The chairs, so called because at the time of the death of the Father of His Country they were painted black, with funeral urns enhanced in gilt upon them, now grace the living-room of the Moon residence.

One of the chairs has the original rush bottom, while in the second one a new rush seat was placed several years ago.

The chairs have been in the Moon family for several generations. The Misses Moon received them from their mother, the late Charlotte Greene Moon, who in turn had inherited them from her mother, the late Sarah A. Green Mull. They had been the property in Colonial times of Dr. Redman. After Dr. Redman's death the two came into possession of William Greene, who handed them down to his daughter, Sarah A. Greene Mull.

It was while they were in possession of Dr. Redman, at the time of the death of General Washington, that according to a popular custom the chairs were painted black, and the funeral urns placed in gilt thereon. The urns on each number seven, three being on spindles at the back of the chair, and two on spindles on either side. The chairs are approximately three feet in height.

At the Fallsington Library are also to be found many relics that date back nearly two centuries, some of them being gifts to the library from the late Mary A. Williams.

One of the ancient pieces is a china plate belonging at one time to Louis Philippe, from the palace of the Tuilleries, at the time of the Revolution in 1848. Another prized piece is a water cooler made by hand in Jericho. Also to be found in the glass cases at the Library are: a London cook-book, dated 1762; portfolios of French Art; one piece of china dated about 1790; a carved wooden salad set, consisting of spoon and fork from Switzerland; a piece of the yew tree under which Gray wrote his famed Elegy; a $1 Virginia Treasury note dated 1862; a piece of baked brick from the San Miguel Church, Santa Fe, N. M., established in 1550.

In addition to ostrich eggs, pieces of coral, arrowheads, etc., there is a large collection of curios presented the library by the late William Hazard, following his trip around the world.

The bride wore a floor-length gown of white taffeta, a corsage of pale pink rose-buds, and from a cluster of white flowers in her hair there was draped a shoulder-length veil. Her slippers were of white. Her attendant, Mrs. Marek, wore a long model in teal blue taffeta, a corsage of deep pink rose-buds, a floral head-dress and shoulder-length veil of teal blue, and slippers to match.

CONGESTION SLOWS BUSINESS

A survey indicates that shoppers are avoiding congested sections, with serious effect on retail business. Two thousand merchants, representing the entire United States, agree in this.

Little is offered in the way of constructive remedies except decentralization, through the scattering of store and other business buildings over wider areas and the establishment of branch stores, in the larger cities, away from congested centers.

Readily understandable is the hesitancy among merchants to resort to such a plan. Capital outlay would be tremendous and widespread business losses would result. The purpose of traffic regulation is to protect and aid the general public. Indirectly, traffic rules which make it easy for the shopper benefit the shopkeeper.

Wider driveways and sidewalks are not feasible, because of the prohibitive cost, in sections already built up along narrow thoroughfares. In few cities and towns are there enough parallel routes to relieve congestion by distributing traffic over a number of streets. And there seems to be no attempt on the part of certain classes of traffic to ascertain for their own convenience the paths of least resistance.

If traffic problems are to be solved there must be a willingness on the part of all elements to cooperate and, if need be, make sacrifices for the common good.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN
After Andy left, Brule turned to Rue.

"You'd better take the small guest room tonight, the one next to my study; I told Gross to have it made ready for you. Go to bed, Rue. If you want a sedative."

She shuddered, remembering Julie. Brule said coolly:
"Better lock your door tonight, Rue. A thing like this—there's no telling where it may end."

The queer thing was that in the night she remembered what Brule had said. Quite clearly and sharply, as if he were saying it again, warning her.
The trouble was she hadn't locked the door.
That was quite late, after Brule had been called away to see a patient.
It was the ringing of the telephone that awakened her out of a troubled, haunted sleep that wasn't quite sleep nor was it quite sensible awareness. She could hear it plainly through the closed door between the small guest room and Brule's own study; she could hear the low murmur of Brule's voice in reply.

She heard, too, for the house was quiet, the subsequent closing of the door from Brule's suite into the hall in about the time it would have taken him to dress, and presently another low murmur of voices from somewhere in the hall. She sat up, listening; she didn't know whether there were still policemen in the house or not; had they left a guard in the house to see that none of them tried to escape?

Whether or not that was the case, there was after a while a muffled closing of the heavy front door as if by a cautious hand. She didn't hear—couldn't have heard from that room—the sound of the car. But she knew after two months of marriage what the telephone in the night and the closing of the front door meant.
The house seemed extremely quiet after Brule had gone. Lying there in the dark room Rue began again (as she was to do so many times) to go over in her mind the whole course of events as she knew them. There wasn't, as Andy had said, and the attitude of the others and of the police made all too clear, much use in hoping that Julie's death would prove to be suicide.

There was, of course, a line of specious reasoning they could take; that was that Julie had accidentally given Crystal the drug that killed her and then herself committed suicide when the police inquiry at last opened.

It was specious; Rue knew that Julie hadn't committed suicide; Julie would have faced even so tragic a mistake rather than suicide. And Julie would not have come to her, Rue, if she'd intended to escape the consequences of any such mistake by suicide.

Furthermore, knowing Julie and knowing as she did the nursing routine for Crystal, a mistake that would have caused Crystal's death simply wasn't possible. She also knew that there was no drug used in treatment, there was no drug available, that could possibly have been substituted by accident for medicine; such a substitution would have had to be intentional.

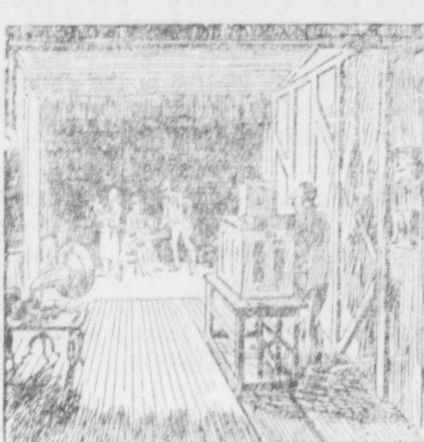

But she thought from what she saw of Guy's and Brule's attitude that such a line of defense might be

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol Nov. 21, 1878. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

An old man named Charles Yopp died at Trenton on Saturday after being buried alive for nearly 20 hours in a swamp back of that city. Yopp went out a few days ago to gather water-cresses, accompanied by a little dog. On the following afternoon the dog's persistent barking attracted the attention of a Mrs. Gilbert, whose husband has a small farm bordering on the swamp. She went to the spot whence the sound proceeded and was horrified to discover the head and shoulders of a man, who was evidently exhausted and unconscious, protruding from the black mud. One hand clung to a tuft of grass and the other was extended. Mrs. Gilbert went for her husband, and the two, with other help, returned to find the man sunk still lower and still sinking. To extricate him was a work of great difficulty and took several hours' time, but it was finally accomplished by means of fence rails and ropes. The man was taken to Gilbert's house, and in half an hour he revived sufficiently to say that his name was Charles Yopp and to tell in a broken way the story of his adventure. He was attempting to get hold of a fine bunch of water-cresses when he dropped his basket into what looked like a filled-up ditch. He jumped in after it and sank instantly, and to his amazement found that something seemed to be drawing him still further down. His body was paralyzed by fear, and he cried for help with all his might, but in vain. At length, being still powerless to move, he abandoned himself, as he supposed, to death. Night came soon however, and with it a slight revival of strength. He had now sunk to his hips, and although he felt stronger, there was nothing within reach upon which he could lay hands. He thought he sank at the rate of an inch an hour. ## The Great Game of Politics both the verbal and printed emanations of New Deal spokesmen and by the bad temper of the Democratic committee publicity.

QUITE a number of things have contributed to enhance this feeling. First, of course, there was the bad taste left by the Chicago convention; second, there was the refusal of Mr. Farley to conduct the campaign because of his opposition to a third term; third, there is the friction between the Democratic national committee management and the "close friends" of Mr. Roosevelt; fourth, there is the vulnerability of Mr. Eddle Flynn, the New York machine professional who has succeeded Mr. Farley, and whose unsavory associations have been commented upon from time to time by a good many people, including Mayor LaGuardia.

FIFTH, there is the effective way in which Mr. Willkie has dealt with the scandalous law violation of the Democratic campaign book advertising racket, by which contributions have been blacked out from corporations; sixth, there are the charges that Mr. "Chip" Roberts, secretary of the committee, has obtained for his contracting firm a million dollars worth of defense program contracts; seventh, there is the ineptitude of the Democratic publicity, which seems to indicate that Mr. Michelson, once the champion smearer, has lost his grip and can produce little save monotonous name calling reiteration and references to Mr. Willkie as the "Utility Candidate" and the "Straw Boss"—whatever that may mean.

AND FINALLY, there is the realization that Mr. Willkie is a first-class fighting man, able, resourceful, with personality, sincerity and brains—in brief, that he is a very formidable candidate, indeed, wholly different from the "setups" Mr. Roosevelt has faced in the past and the one which he had expected to face in this campaign. Couple all these things with the trend shown by the Gallup polls and then add the number of Democrats—and Democratic newspapers—who supported Mr. Roosevelt in 1936, but are now openly against him, and the reasons for the present worry of the third-term managers are easy to understand.

IN connection with these open Democratic bolters, the more astute of the Roosevelt aides know that there is even more danger from resentful Democratic leaders not in the open, but just as anxious to bring about a change in administration. Among these can be included many Democratic Senators—particularly those whom Mr. Roosevelt tried to drive out of public life in 1938—who, for personal reasons, will support the ticket on the surface, but will not lift a finger really to help. They will make certain face-saving gestures, but in their hearts they ardently hope for the Roosevelt defeat, and most of them will do what they can, safely, to bring it about. Mr. Roosevelt has more than one such Democrat actually holding office under him.

OF COURSE, the third-term effort is not without strong political aspects. There is the great army of WPA relief workers; there are the 950,000 civil employees of the Government; there are the great political machines in New York, Chicago, New Jersey and elsewhere. Also, organized labor is concededly largely still with the President and he unquestionably has a great personal following. Despite all this, however, the realistic among his managers know that success is linked with the war. In the last analysis he will be put over because the war situation has paralyzed the reasoning faculties of the voters, or he will not.

APPRECIATION of this fact, if fully comprehended, ought to be enough for general public concern. To a man of Mr. Roosevelt's disposition and in his position the temptation to use the "national emergency" created by the war to save himself can hardly be overestimated. There are those who think that if he should feel himself faced with humiliating defeat, he easily might resort to desperate action. They know that he is surrounded by men who would stop at little to avert a defeat that would be calamitous to them as well as to him. The potentialities of such a situation are not pleasant to contemplate. It is not surprising that those who grasp fully the facts, watch Mr. Roosevelt's course these days on foreign affairs with profound concern.

GARMENT EXHIBITORS WANT TO IMPROVE ON EFFORTS EACH YEAR

By Miss Edna Stephany
(Home Economics Representative)

"Why didn't I get first premium on my dress?" That's what puzzled exhibitors often ask after judging is finished.

The value of competitive exhibits is measured by the degree in which the exhibitors' standards are raised. Women who exhibit garments want to know how to improve their work from year to year. By seeing the articles exhibited, women get ideas and compare the results of judging to a recognized standard. The judging is not a personal matter with the judge.

An exhibitor wants the judge's first impression to be a favorable one. Clean, well-pressed and neatly folded garments help to meet this requirement.

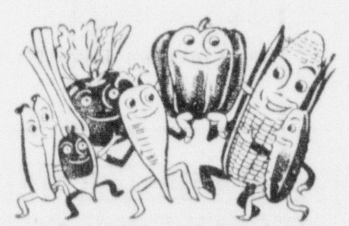

The judge considers the design of the garment and its purpose in relation to the material used. A tailored design which calls for straight, crisp lines will lose its beauty if made of a soft, flimsy fabric. A design featuring soft shirring or draping will give the effect desired only if made up in a soft material that drapes easily. Regardless of the type of material, it should be of a quality that justifies the time labor, and money spent on making it into a garment. The beauty and suitability of a patterned fabric is also considered. The simplest designs are usually the most attractive and most serviceable.

Trimnings must add beauty to the dress and not just fill up space. They must be suitable to the fabric and the purpose of the dress. For example, all wash garments call for washable colorfast trimmings, and it should be as durable as the fabric of the dress. Colors are judged for harmonious combinations and suitability to the kind of garment. Becomingness is an important factor, but cannot be judged without the wearer.

Workmanship counts, but no more than color selection or beauty of design. The judge looks for smooth neat plackets, even flat hems that are firm but inconspicuous, and firmly attached fasteners. Button-holes are appropriate for buttons if they are used. The habit of sewing buttons over snap fasteners is discouraged.

SUMMER SAVOR IN STUFFED PEPPERS

The gay riot of fresh vegetables beckoning from stores and gardens is a pleasant reminder that their use in summer menus need be occasioned not only by the fact that they are "good for you." Their crisp texture and stimulating piquancy are a special help for you who are trying to make meals tantalizing in spite of the summer's heat.

Vegetables as main dishes are especially tempting in summer, and green peppers baked with a stuffing are particularly popular in this role. Bearing a stuffing of canned or prepared foods, they are quick dishes. Or they may be filled with a tasty combination of left-overs to help you economize. Thus new recipes for pepper stuffings are always in demand.

Preparing Green Peppers

You will want to select firm, crisp looking green peppers for stuffing. If they are large, cut them in halves. The medium and small ones may have their tops cut from them. Wash the seeds away and drop into boiling salted water, then remove the pan of water from the heat and let peppers stand in the water about five minutes. Drain the peppers and they are ready to stuff. When baking them, watch to see that they don't lose their firmness.

Ham Stuffing for Green Peppers

Combine, mixing thoroughly—
2 cups chopped cooked ham
1 small onion, finely chopped
Dash of pepper
1 cup rice flakes
1 tablespoon 57-beefsteak sauce
1/2 cup milk

2 tablespoons butter
1/4 cup tomato ketchup.

Prepare six large halved peppers or six small ones as directed above. Fill peppers with ham mixture and place in baking pan. Bake in a moderate oven (375° F.) about 30 minutes or until heated through.

Cooked Spaghetti in Green Pepper Cases

Prepare six par-boiled green peppers as directed above, then open a large (24-oz.) can cooked spaghetti in tomato sauce and fill the cases with it. Dust lightly with salt and cover with buttered crumbs. Place in a baking pan, then pour four tablespoons water around peppers. Bake in a moderate oven (375° F.) until peppers are tender but still firm and the crumbs are nicely browned. Serves six.

Oven-Baked Beans in Green Pepper Cases

To serve four, prepare four large green peppers as directed above, then spoon beans from a medium (18-oz.) can oven-baked beans with pork and tomato sauce into the peppers. Sprinkle with buttered rice flakes or bread crumbs, place in baking dish, then pour four tablespoons water around peppers and bake in a moderate oven (375° F.) until peppers are tender and the crumbs are brown.

Sausage and Macaroni Stuffing for Peppers

Fry until brown, crumbling into small bits with a fork—
1 pound sausage meat.
Combine with—
1 medium (17-oz.) can cooked macaroni in cream sauce with cheese
1/2 cup tomato ketchup.

Fill six peppers, prepared as directed above, with this mixture and arrange in baking dish. Pour just enough water around the peppers to prevent sticking. Cover the top of each with soft bread crumbs and bake in a moderate oven (375° F.) about 45 minutes or until heated through.

Wedding Here Followed By Reception in Torresdale

At a mid-August wedding here on Saturday afternoon, Miss Alethia V. Myers, a member of the faculty of Bristol high school, became the bride of Mr. Leonard J. Bassett, Norfolk, Va., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Bassett, 624 Corson street. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Myers, 145 Otter street.

The nuptial ceremony took place in the rectory of St. Mark's Church, at four o'clock, with the Rev. Father E. Paul Baird officiating, the bride being escorted by her father.

Serving the former Miss Myers as maid of honor was Miss Catherine M. Weik, 153 Otter street; and the best man was Mr. Lawrence Mulligan, Buckley street. The usher was Mr. Lewis M. Myers, Otter street, a brother of the bride.

Pianist for the occasion was Miss Marie Buchler, Jefferson avenue, who prior to the ceremony gave a recital of suitable selections. For the entrance of the bridal party she played the wedding march from Lohengrin, using the Mendelssohn march as a recessional. Mr. John M. Smith, Roselle, N. J., a cousin of the bride, was the vocalist, his selection being "I Love You Truly."

A large company of relatives and friends witnessed the ceremony, and 80 were served at the wedding supper when a reception followed at Crestmont Farms, Torresdale, the home of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lawrence, Jr.

Chosen by the bride for the ceremony was a gown of white embossed marquisette, the model buttoning down the back to the waist. The shirred bodice had close-fitting neckline, with diamond pin worn at the front; and short puffed sleeves. The full skirt was floor-length. Her fingertip veil of tulle was attached to a wreath of valley lilies. She wore long lace mitts, slippers of white kid, and carried a colonial bouquet of white rose-buds.

The maid of honor, Miss Weik, was attractively gowned in white net, fashioned colonial style. The net was alternated with wide rows of pink and pale blue silk braid. The floor length model had a low neck-line, and short puffed sleeves. Sandals were white, and this attendant wore a wreath of pink and blue flowers in her hair, and carried a colonial bouquet formed of pink and blue flowers.

The men of the wedding party wore white Palm Beach suits, blue neckties, white oxfords, and rose boutonnières.

Mrs. Myers, mother of the bride, selected for the event a dress of navy blue and white sheer, with white accessories. Her hat of white haku straw had trim of white velvet ribbon, with navy blue veil. Her corsage was of pink roses. Mrs. Bassett, mother of the groom, was attired in rose toned lace, rose felt hat, rose accessories, and wore a corsage of white flowers.

Immediately after the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Bassett left for a short wedding trip. They will reside in Norfolk, Va., where the groom is engaged as manager of a nationally-known shoe firm's retail store. For the journey the bride wore a navy jacket suit of sheer crepe, with trim of pink, navy felt hat, navy and white kid slippers and white accessories; her corsage being of pink roses.

The bride is a graduate of Bristol high school, and of the West Chester State Teachers College. For the past four years she has been teaching in the English department of Bristol high school.

Gifts of the bride to her attendant and pianist were enameled compacts, upon which names of the recipients were engraved. The groom presented his attendants with leather wallets.

Guests attending the affair were from Harrisburg, York, Philadelphia and Bristol, Pa., and Norfolk, Va.

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL THEATRE

A new birthful mystery picture featuring Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard arrived yesterday at the Bristol Theatre. It is titled "The Ghost Breakers," which, for your information, are people who rid haunted houses of these pests. The co-stars had plenty to do in this respect.

George Marshall, the director, made it with a smile and goosepimples. One moment you're silently holding your breath not knowing what will happen next when, without warning, Bob Hope or his colored man-servant, Willie Best, makes a remark that convulses the audience.

GRAND THEATRE

A motion picture as timely as tomorrow's headlines flashed across the screen last night when "The Mortal Storm" opened an engagement of two days at the Grand Theatre.

Characterized by brilliant performances upon the part of an outstanding cast, this film is designed to make audiences think. In brief, it tells the story of a family, a happy family which suddenly finds itself beaten, divided against itself and helpless against a regime of terror which sweeps down upon it.

Margaret Sullivan, who may always be depended upon for a sterling performance, surpasses anything she has done previously as the hapless heroine.

CAREY'S PITCHING FEATURES GAME PLAYED HERE

Landreth Hurler Was Also Good With The Stick

DAVID SMART ON BASES

Local Nine Defeats Germantown A. A. by Score of 9 to 4

Al Carey's pitching and batting and smart baserunning by Larry David featured the game yesterday afternoon at Landreth Park in which Landreth Seeds defeated the Germantown A. A., 9-4.

For 5 innings the game was closely contested with the visitors holding a 4-3 advantage.

Base on balls to David and VanSant, a fielders' choice and Carey's single and an out gave the "Farmers" three runs in the second inning.

The visitors with aid of an error by Zefferies and singles by Houghton and Wagner added a run in the third.

Gilligan and Kleinman's hits in the fourth, Bolger's sacrifice and Houghton's hit by pitched ball, loaded the bases. All three scored when Costello made a wild heave of T. Greene's roller.

Landreth won the game in the sixth with a four-run rally. David safe on T. Greene's error, Griggs was passed. David stole third and scored on Zefferies' hit. VanSant singled, counting Griggs. Cahill's infield hit and Miksis' single accounted for two more.

After McGeehan had replaced Houghton on the mound in the seventh the Seeds added two more runs.

The visitors made but two hits off Carey in the last five innings. Both were scratches.

Landreth Seeds will travel to 21st and Johnston streets, Philadelphia, tonight to meet Girard Estate in a twilight game. This team leads the South Phila. League and has won 25 of 28 games played.

BOXING FANS AWAIT TEN BOUTS FOR TONIGHT

The boxing fans of this section will be treated to ten thrilling bouts tonight in the St. Ann's A. A. outdoor arena, Wood and Franklin streets, if the plans of the officials work out. All bouts will be sanctioned by the Middle Atlantic district of the A. A. U.

Two bouts are almost certain to be sanctioned. The one between Carman Orrino, Seibol fighter, and Tony Biancosino, of the Boco Boys, and that between Sol DeLessa, Lamb's Club, and William Whitlock, East Side. The Biancosino-Orrino bout will be worth the admission price alone even if these boys put on one-half the showing they had in their previous meeting. Orrino won this bout but the decision was so close that for two weeks the fans were disputing the judgment of the officials and demanded a return bout.

Now, both of these boys will be out for a knockout. Orrino has the power behind his punches while it is up to Biancosino to batter his way to victory as he is the boxer type of fighter and not a slugger.

The fans of last week know the prowess of both DeLessa and Whitlock. These two 112-pounders are in action the minute the bell sounds to start and never finish until the last bell. The decision of last week which was given to DeLessa was booed by the fans who thought that the East Side fighter should have had the verdict.

Joe Meyers who made his first comeback fight last week will be back to fight another opponent from East Side. Al Cicanti will be on the card and efforts are being made to get a match for Al Conrad who is developing into one of Bristol's best. Conrad lost his first bout last week, being beaten by George Chelton.

First bout is scheduled for 8:45 o'clock sharp.

CROYDON Y. M. A. TO MEET JOHNSON'S STARS HERE

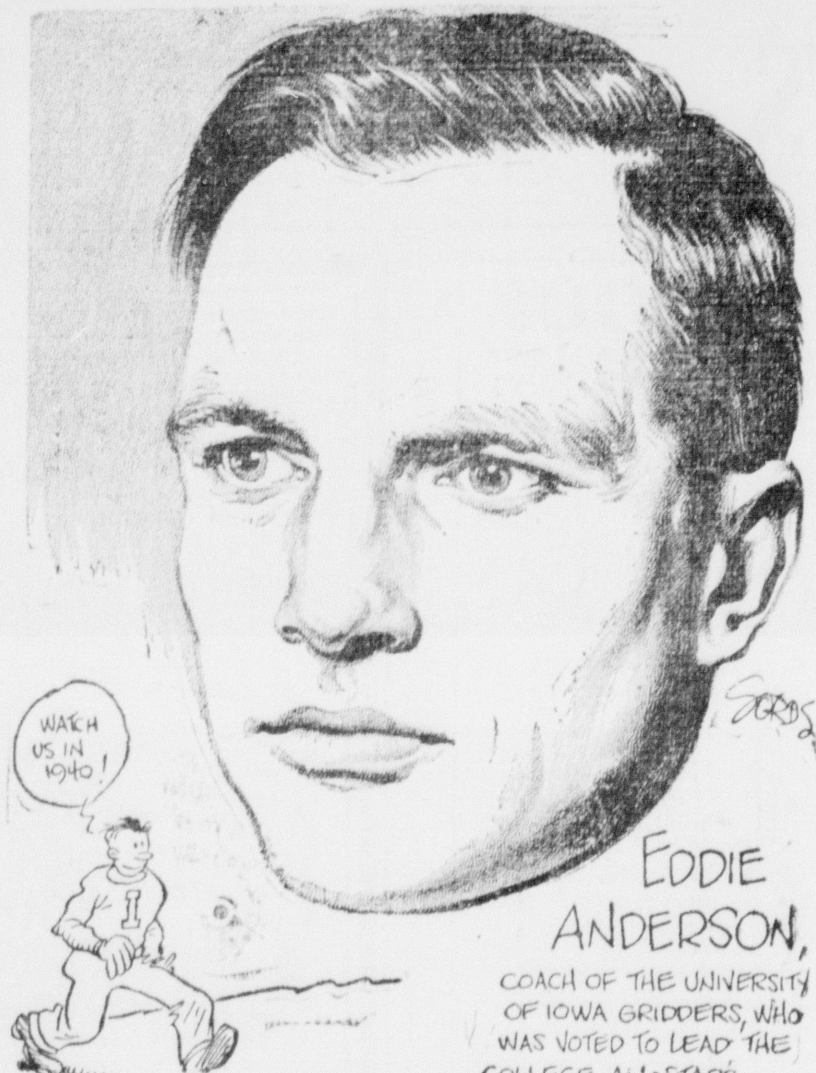

Saturday's scheduled tilt having been called off because of rain, the Croydon Y. M. A. nine and the Johnson Colored Stars will meet tonight in an independent game on Landreth's field. Game will begin at 6:15 o'clock sharp.

Both clubs have proud records to show for their season's activities. Croydon is leading the Bristol Suburban League with a record of 16 and 6 while Johnson's have been beaten but once by the Diamond team, also of the Bristol Suburban League.

Johnson and Ringgold will be the battery for the colored boys while Snyder will pitch, and McCue do the catching for Croydon.

Lower Bucks Boasts 3 Summer Theatres

Comprise the advisory board, reside in the Delaware Valley.

Bucks County Playhouse follows the Summer theatre pattern of a permanent company with name players in the lead roles. Of the 60 such stars "Jobbing" this season in the East, those who are appearing either at Princeton or New Hope include Jane Cowl, Lenore Ulric, Constance Collier, Effie Shannon, Peggy Wood, Betty Field, Ina Claire, Pauline Lord, Ethel Barrymore, Paul Robeson and Claudia Morgan.

At New Hope, the permanent company, a revival in new form of the old stock company, is made up of players living in the vicinity. Most prominent is the actress Halla Stoddard, in private life Mrs. Jack Kirkland. She and her husband live on a lovely farm at Springfield.

Many of the players lease homes in the New Hope region for the Summer. The Cobweb Theatre at Yardley and the Morrisville Community Theatre have stock companies with star leads. In Yardley, there has been a committee of nearby residents working in behalf of the company which appears in the Town Community Centre, the former Odd Fellows' Home. Harold B. Putney, director of dramatics at Trinity School and a member of the faculty of Agatha School, both of New York City, is the director.

Presiding over Morrisville Community Theatre is Josh Binney, former director of silent pictures in Hollywood. A carefully chosen cast appears in all this theatre's productions, assisted occasionally by a few local players.

More Nazi Planes Sweep Over England; Incendiary Bombs

beams and heard heavy explosions in the direction of the French coast.

Apparently two attacks were carried out by Royal Air Force planes on a German-held French harbor—the second with bombs of a heavy calibre.

Aircraft were heard going to and returning from the French coastal region.

Meanwhile, gangs of workmen aided air raid precaution crews in repairing the damages caused by yesterday's raids on south London suburbs, and local funds were started to provide housing for those left homeless by the attacks.

No less than 600 German bombers raided the London region in two great attacks yesterday, but these massive assaults were met by fierce opposition and got no further than the suburbs around Croydon and the region over the Thames Estuary, British authorities said.

Although with considerably diminished intensity, German raiders during the night and early this morning struck at Britain's southeast coastal region. London circles expressed the opinion that the heavy losses claimed to have been inflicted on the German raiders yesterday was responsible for the decreased intensity of the attacks.

The British Air Ministry stated that at least 140 German planes were destroyed in yesterday's battles while only 16 British aircraft were lost, and that the pilots of eight of these planes were safe.

(Editor's Note: A Berlin announcement claimed 138 British planes had been destroyed and that only 34 German planes were lost.)

Today, however, British air raid precaution, ambulance and rescue squads, aided by firemen and police, toiled for hours in a southeastern coastal town following a raid by an enemy plane.

One house in this town was demolished and numerous others badly damaged by high explosive and incendiary bombs. Two persons were injured and trapped under wreckage.

Fires broke out in several parts of the town but were quickly brought under control. In one section a number of houses were damaged when incendiary missiles struck a large garage.

Later the whole town was heavily shaken by the detonation of a delayed-action bomb which, however, failed to cause serious damage.

Later in the morning British fighting planes chased another raider over southeastern England out to sea.

Considerable mystery shrouded the circumstances behind a British press association report that British planes had bombed and "completely disorganized" five divisions of German troops preparing to invade Britain from the French channel coast. This report said the Nazi forces were massed on beaches between Boulogne and Calais when they were attacked.

Later, however, the air ministry said there was no official confirmation of these reports and the ministry of information branded it as "untrue."

The official announcement stating 14 German planes were shot down yesterday said this figure "represents the heaviest defeat the enemy has yet suffered at the hands of British fighters and ground defenses," taking into consideration the number of German planes anticipating in the attacks.

During the night approximately 50 German raiders passed over a southeastern coastal town dropping a number of bombs in the vicinity.

The attackers crossed the coast at a tremendous altitude, apparently aiming at the London area but British fighters and anti-aircraft guns went into action immediately and the German bombers turned back across the sea with British chasers in swift pursuit. It was believed that several of the German planes were shot down.

The Nazi bombers jettisoned scores of bombs in the Thames Estuary marshes when they were intercepted. One bomber crashed and sank in 10 feet of marsh.

The British Air Ministry news service said that a terrific barrage of fire by anti-aircraft batteries in the Thames Estuary region forced seventy German bombers to turn back last night.

The bombers, accompanied by fighting planes, formed a large rectangle. British Spitfire craft engaged the Messerschmitt escort and shot down five while several others were believed to have been damaged, while anti-aircraft gunners shot down a total of 13.

Airports Near London Are Targets

Berlin, Aug. 19.—Airports around London and in Kent and Hampshire, and military objectives in other areas of England bore the brunt of yesterday's massive German air raids on Britain, the German high command stated today.

A war communique, giving details of the air assaults, was issued shortly after a Berlin announcement said new Nazi raids and reconnaissance flights were in progress over England this morning.

It was stated, however, that in today's attacks the German planes were carrying limited numbers of bombs and that small-scale attacks, especially against armament and airplane factories, barracks and military camps, this could be expected.

The communique also raised the previous German estimate of British losses in yesterday's aerial combats. It claimed that the British yesterday lost 147 planes, of which 124 were shot down in air battles and 23 were destroyed on the ground or by anti-aircraft batteries.
